

THE SETTLER COMPLEX

RECUPERATING BINARISM IN COLONIAL STUDIES

EDITED BY PATRICK WOLFE

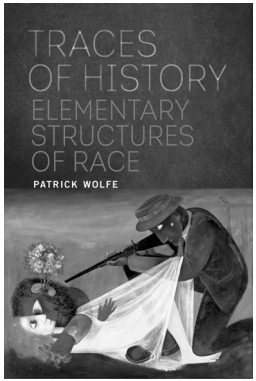

CONTRIBUTORS

Lauren Jessica Amsterdam
Kevin Bruyneel
Adria L. Imada
K. Tsianina Lomawaima
Ilan Pappe
Andrea Smith
Ken Whalen
Tracey Banivanua Mar
Glen Sean Coulthard
Beenash Jafri
Maya Mikdashi
Dean Itsuji Saranillio
Manu Vimalassery
Patrick Wolfe

FORTHCOMING FROM

UCLA AMERICAN INDIAN STUDIES CENTER PRESS

To be published in August 2015

TRACES OF HISTORY ELEMENTARY STRUCTURES OF RACE

PATRICK WOLFE

In Traces of History: Elementary Structures of Race, Patrick Wolfe charts the persistence of colonial domination into the so-called 'post'-colonial present, demonstrating how contemporary regimes of race continue to reproduce, reconstitute and preserve the historical relationships of inequality into which European colonizers initially coopted conquered populations. At once both a new methodology for comparative colonial studies and a new, historical-materialist account of race, this book presents a co-ordinated set of studies of the racialization of Aboriginal people in Australia, of African Americans in the USA, of Jews in Central Europe, and of both Blacks and Natives in Brazil, concluding with sustained comparative case studies of the shifting racial character of European settler colonialism as practiced on Indians in the USA and on Arab-Jews in Israel/Palestine, an integrated comparative procedure that enables us to identify the common features of Western colonial strategy and, on that basis, to develop self-determining alternatives to the imperialist world order.

VERSO

To be published in August 2015.